

“A TALE OF TWO NOBELS: LIU XIAOBO AND MO YAN”

Professor Perry Link

Chancellorial Chair for Innovative Teaching Comparative Literature & Foreign Languages, University of California, Riverside;
Emeritus Professor of East Asian Studies, Princeton University

3:30 p.m., Thursday, 21 February 2013

Poole Room, Wardlaw Center; Georgia Tech campus

177 North Avenue, Atlanta, Georgia 30332

Please join us for this free event; registration requested by Feb. 19th at

<http://chinacenter.net/events>

What is the writer's place in China today? What should it be? What responsibilities does a writer have to readers? To the state? To art? To moral principle? China's two recent Nobel Prize winners, Liu Xiaobo for peace, and Mo Yan for literature, offer some contrasting answers.

The China Research Center's Annual Lecture

Organized by The China Research Center and co-sponsored by the Hong Kong Atlanta Trade Office, and Georgia Tech's School of History, Technology and Society and The School of Modern Languages (Guest Lecture Series).